BJP shares AI video mocking DK Shivakumar ahead of Karnataka swearing-in

New Delhi, Agency: Ahead of Congress leader DK Shivakumar's oath-taking ceremony as Karnataka chief minister on Wednesday, the BJP launched a sharp attack on the Congress government through a series of posts on X, criticising and alleging failures in governance. In an AI-generated video shared late Tuesday night, BJP Karnataka depicted DK Shivakumar travelling in a SUV in waterlogged roads. In another post, BJP Karnataka accused the Congress government of neglecting farmers ahead of the monsoon season. The party alleged that the state government had failed to ensure the supply of adequate and quality seeds and fertilizers, while also not providing compensation to farmers who suffered crop losses due to rain. "The state Congress government has completely neglected farmers. It has utterly failed to provide adequate, quality seeds and fertilizers to the food providers preparing for the monsoon," the BJP said, adding that farmers would continue to suffer until such a government was removed from power.

SC sets up expert panel on Aravalis petitioners question its independence

New Delhi, Agency:

In search of a new expansive definition of 'Aravali hills and ranges' after dropping the earlier court-accepted controversial 100m height criteria, Supreme Court has entrusted the task to a five-member high-powered committee that'll include experts from Indian Council of Forestry Research & Education, Forest Survey of India and Geological Survey of India. A bench of CJI Surya Kant and Justices Joymalya Bagchi and Vipul M Pancholi said while the DG of ICFRE will be ex-officio chairperson, the other members would be FSI ex-DG Subhash Ashutosh, GSI's former director Rajendra K Sharma, MoEF ex-joint secretary Brij Mohan Singh Rathore and Ashok K Bhatnagar, former head of botany, DU. The committee is to submit its report by Aug 31.

Environmentalists, two of whom are petitioners in the case, asked how a panel led by a bureaucrat who reports to govt could fulfil the objective of a "fair, impartial and independent" assessment. Committee to assess impact of 'regulated mining' in newly-marked Aravali areas. The committee is mandated mainly to examine the ecological validity of both the 100metre elevation and 500-metre gap criteria applied by the earlier panel's report, which was accepted by SC in its Nov 20 last year judgment. The CJI-led bench had stayed the operation of that definition.

HPC would examine "whether the widely publicised criticism asserting that only 1,048 hills out of 12,081 in Rajasthan meet the 100-metre elevation threshold, thereby stripping the remaining lower ranges of environmental protection, is factually and scientifically accurate".

Importantly, HPC will analyse "whether 'sustainable mining' or 'regulated mining' within the newly demarcated Aravali areas, notwithstanding regulatory oversight, would result in any adverse ecological consequences" and also carry out a detailed identification of the territories that would be excluded from protection under the new definition of Aravali, keeping in view its ecosystem and biodiversity. The bench said, "HPC is expected to objectively assess the implications of the measures contemplated and assist this court in determining whether their implementation may give rise to ecological, environmental, or other consequences that may subsequently prove difficult, if not impossible, to reverse."

Married daughter entitled to compassionate job: SC

New Delhi, Agency: Supreme Court Tuesday ruled that a dependent married daughter could not be excluded from the definition of 'family' and would be entitled to seek employment or allotment of a ration shop if any of her parents died in harness. A bench of Justices P S Narasimha and Alok Aradhe faulted a provision of a UP govt order relating to allotment of PDS shop on dependent quota for excluding married daughters from the definition of 'family' and said it breached the doctrine of equality embedded in the constitutional framework. "Exclusion of a married daughter from the definition of 'family' cannot be sustained," it said.

Writing the judgment, Justice Aradhe said marital status bore no rational nexus to the status of dependency and the object of compassionate appointment or allotment of ration shops, which is to enable the family to overcome financial hardship caused due to death of the bread earner.

The bench said marriage neither extinguished the bond between a daughter and her parental family nor furnished a valid basis to presume absence of dependency. The UP govt order included "unmarried, legally separated and widowed daughters" as dependents.

CBSE debacle: Teen 'cyber security researcher' flags NTA portal vulnerabilities

New Delhi, Agency: NTA on Tuesday scrambled to patch up vulnerabilities in its NEETUG portal which were highlighted by a teen "cyber security researcher", who warned that the chink could potentially be exploited to hack sensitive information.

Rylen Anil, identifying himself as a 16 year-old "cyber security researcher", sounded the warning on X. Interestingly, he is followed by the NTA administration.

The agency, reeling under criticism over the paper leak, moved fast to plug the crack which could have potentially helped outsiders access details linked to examination observers, centre coordinators and test centres - including names, mobile numbers and email addresses. Sources, in the agency acknowledged the repair job, but stopped short of endorsing Anil's statement about the damage it could have caused.

Anil alleged that the vulnerabilities may have enabled actions such as exporting internal records, generating appointment letters, modifying observer data, uploading templates and managing administrative mappings linked to the examination process, triggering concern among students, parents and cybersecurity observers.

As screenshots and allegations circulated online, several users reported that the re-examination portal link had temporarily stopped working and was displaying a "404 Not Found" message. The development further fuelled speculation online regarding possible backend intervention or emergency technical changes. In the evening, NTA officials maintained necessary corrective measures were implemented and the portal was functioning normally.
